

Recording Your Voice for Cloning

Goal: one clean 60–90 second voice memo. I use it to build a clone of your voice for narration.

How to record (iPhone Voice Memos)

1. Quiet room with soft surfaces (a bedroom or closet is ideal). No fans, TV, music or kitchen noise.
2. Phone 6–10 inches from your mouth, slightly off to the side so your breath doesn't pop.
3. Speak the way you do on Instagram: warm, natural, a little upbeat. Don't "announce".
4. Leave 2 seconds of silence at the start.
5. Send the original memo (Share → the Claude app). Don't record a screen or a speaker.

Read this (then add 20–30 seconds of just talking)

Hi! Welcome to the little red barn. I'm so glad you're here. Every morning feels a little different — some days are quiet and slow, and some days are busy, loud, and so much fun. Have you ever found something you didn't know you needed until you saw it? That's my favorite feeling. Grab a coffee, take your time, and tell me — what would you pick first? Honestly? I love this. The early mornings, the people, all of it.

Then just talk for 20–30 seconds about anything: your day, why you started, what you love. Natural speech teaches the clone your real rhythm.

- OK to keep the voice sample in your Google Drive (a private folder) so every new session can use it? I won't commit it to the code repo.
- Any words or names I should pronounce a certain way (property names, your town)?
